

ROBERT J. HOGUET,

9, 11 & 13 Mercer Street.

NEW YORK, July 27th, 1892.

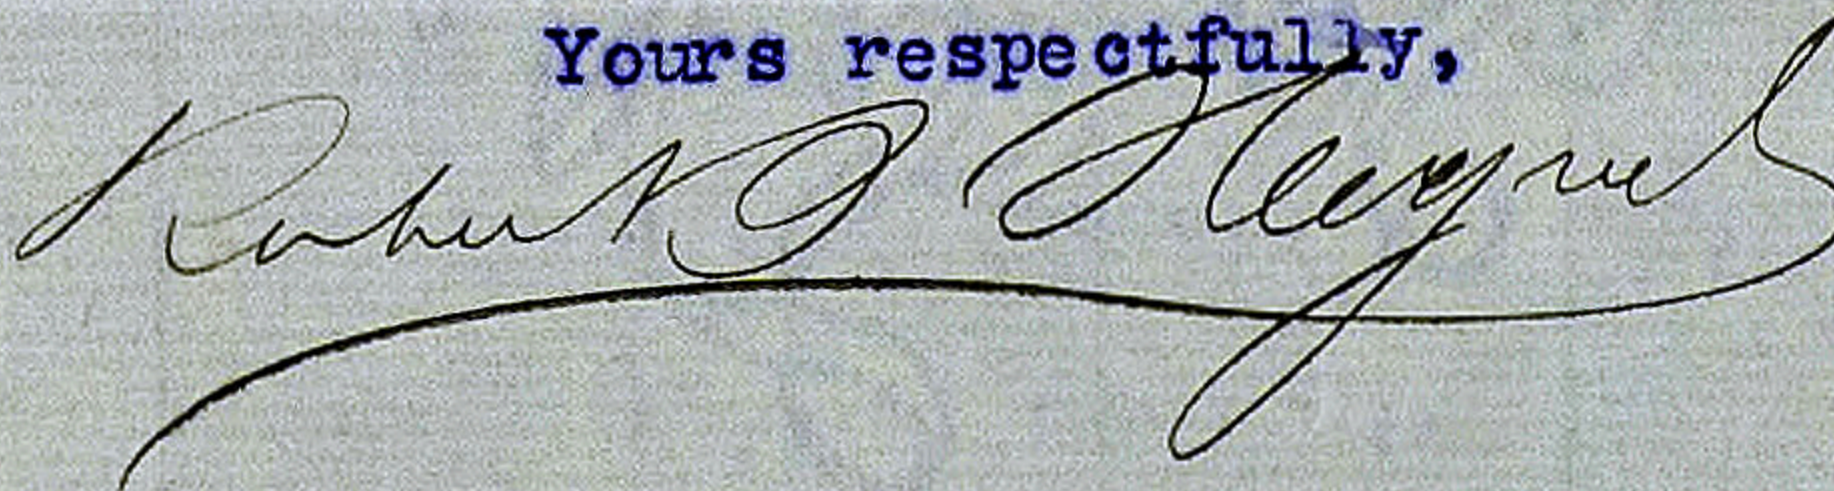

Colonel Bosbyshell,

U.S.Mint, Philadelphia.

Dear Sir:-

Our Committee endeavored to have a meeting to-day to decide the matter of the medals, but unfortunately, there were but few present. We however agreed to send out a circular to all those that the former circular had been sent to, stating that we will not receive any designs after the 10th of August, by which time we know that an Artist of world-wide reputation will send in a design which no doubt will be accepted at once, and placed within your hands to make the medals if that would be time enough for you. I do not exactly remember what price you stated for the so called bronze medal, please let me know. Both the white metal medal and the bronze medal not to exceed 2 inches and $\frac{1}{4}$ in diameter.

Yours respectfully,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read "Robert J. Hoguet", with a long, sweeping underline that extends across the width of the signature.

NARA RG104, Entry 1, Box 177

Robert J. Hoguet
New York,
July 27, 1892

Colonel Bosbyshell,
U.S. Mint, Philadelphia.

Dear Sir: -

Our Committee endeavored to have a meeting to-day to decide the matter of the medals, but unfortunately, there were but few present. We however agreed to send out a circular to all those that the former circular had been sent to, stating that we will not receive any designs after the 10th of August, by which time we know that an Artist of world-wide reputation will send in a design which no doubt will be accepted at once, and placed within your hands to make the medals if that would be time enough for you. I do not exactly remember what price you stated for the so called bronze medal, please let me know. Both the white metal medal and the bronze medal not to exceed 2 inches and $\frac{1}{4}$ in diameter.

Yours respectfully,
Robert J. Hoguet